	COMPLAINT AND JURY DEMAND (AS ENHANCED)
Plaintiff, Bo Shang	("Plaintiff"), brings this Complaint against Defendant Middlesex
County District Atto	orney's Office ("Defendant") and alleges as follows, incorporating additional factual a	nd legal authorities:
1 Plai	ntiff is an individual residing in 10 McCafferty Way, Burlington MA 01803.
2 De	efendant is a public office located in Middlesex County, Massachusetts.

	JURISDICTION AND VENUE
	Court has subject matter jurisdiction nursuant to C.L. a. 242, S.4, andder
2 Th:- /	Court has subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to G.L. c. 212, § 4, and under ion principles for claims brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. See

l	37	arising under the Massachusetts Constitution, the Massachusetts Civil Rights Act	37
l	38	(MCRA), G.L. c. 12, §§ 11H & 11I, and other Massachusetts common law claims.	38
l	39		39
l	40	4 Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to G.L. c. 223, § 1, because the events or	40
l	41	omissions giving rise to this action occurred in Middlesex County and because	41
l	42	Defendant is located in Middlesex County.	42
l	44	FACTUAL BACKGROUND	44
l	45		45
l	46	5 On or about January 8, 2025, Plaintiff alleges that the Middlesex District Attorney's	46
l	47	Office of MA, described by Plaintiff as "corrupt and despicably morally principled,"	47
l	48	filed a data request to Apple, supposedly under Massachusetts Rules of Civil	48
l	49	Procedure 45.	49
l	50		50
l	51	6 This occurred on the same day Plaintiff filed a motion to dismiss Twitch and an AirTag +	51
l	52	commerce tax (App Store) lawsuit against Apple (which hosts the Twitch app).	52
l	53		53
l	54	7 Plaintiff asserts that this data request was not legitimately obtained under Mass. R. Civ.	54
l	55	P. 45 but was instead an illegal measure taken against Plaintiff as an "enemy	55
l	56	combatant," contrary to both domestic and international law, including Geneva	56
l	57	Conventions III & IV, and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights	57
l	58		58
l	59	(ICCPR).	59
l	60		60
l	61	7A. The United States is a party to the four Geneva Conventions of 1949, which set forth	61
l	62	standards for treatment of persons in armed conflicts, including alleged "enemy	62
l	63	combatants." Plaintiff maintains that labeling Plaintiff as an "enemy combatant"	63
l	64	without due process violates customary international humanitarian law and Supreme	64
l	65	Court precedent concerning the rights of such individuals. See, e.g., Hamdi v.	65
l	66	Rumsfeld, 542 U.S. 507 (2004); Rasul v. Bush, 542 U.S. 466 (2004); Boumediene v.	66
l	67	Bush, 553 U.S. 723 (2008).	67
l	68		68
	69	7B. The United States is also a State Party to the ICCPR, which, under Article 9, protects	69
	70	against arbitrary arrest or detention and, under Article 14, protects due process rights.	70
	71	Plaintiff alleges that classifying Plaintiff as an "enemy combatant" in a civilian context,	71
	72	and thereby circumventing ordinary legal process, violates the ICCPR's guarantees of	72

73	fundamental procedural protections.	73
74		74
75	7C. The Supreme Court has further clarified the rights of individuals designated as "enemy	75
76	combatants" in Padilla v. Rumsfeld, 542 U.S. 426 (2004), emphasizing the need for	76
77	proper legal process. Plaintiff alleges these precedents reinforce the argument that	77
78	civilian processes cannot be bypassed via "enemy combatant" designations.	78
79		79
80	7D. In Ex parte Milligan, 71 U.S. (4 Wall.) 2 (1866), the Supreme Court held that applying	80
81	military or martial process to civilians, when civil courts are open, is unconstitutional.	81
82	Plaintiff contends this principle applies here, making any civilian "enemy combatant"	82
83	label unlawful.	83
84		84
85	7E. The Supreme Court in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld, 548 U.S. 557 (2006), further confirmed	85
86	that efforts to circumvent civilian courts through alternative proceedings for alleged	86
87	combatants violate U.S. constitutional principles. Plaintiff alleges that all such	87
88	precedents collectively prohibit unilateral "enemy combatant" branding in non-war	88
89	contexts.	89
90		90
91	8 On January 30, 2025, Plaintiff received an email from Apple regarding this request,	91
92	which stated in part:	92

120		120
121	9 Plaintiff maintains that Defendant violated Plaintiff's rights under federal and state law	121
122	by improperly obtaining and misusing personal data. Plaintiff asserts a violation of	122
123	privacy rights under G.L. c. 214, § 1B (right against unreasonable, substantial or	123
124	serious interference with privacy), Article 14 of the Massachusetts Declaration of	124
125	Rights (protection against unreasonable searches and seizures), the Fourth Amendment	125
126	to the U.S. Constitution, and international human rights norms including Article 17 of	126
127	the ICCPR and Article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR).	127
128		128
129	9A. The UDHR, though not a binding treaty, informs customary international law and reflects	129
130	global human rights standards. Article 12 states that "[n]o one shall be subjected to	130
131	arbitrary interference with his privacy," a principle Plaintiff contends was violated.	131
132		132
133	9B. The United States is also a State Party to the Convention Against Torture (CAT),	133
134	highlighting due process norms. Plaintiff claims that Defendant's labeling and treatment	134
135	of Plaintiff as an "enemy combatant" violate the spirit of these international	135
136	commitments.	136
137		137
138	9C. In United States v. Warshak, 631 F.3d 266 (6th Cir. 2010), the court recognized a	138
139	reasonable expectation of privacy in certain electronic communications, requiring	139
140	proper legal process for data access. Plaintiff alleges Defendant's conduct flouts	140
141	Warshak's privacy rationale.	141
142		142
143	9D. In Kyllo v. United States, 533 U.S. 27 (2001), the Supreme Court held that obtaining	143
144	information through technology not otherwise accessible without physical intrusion	144

145	implicates the Fourth Amendment. Plaintiff characterizes Defendant's subpoena or	145
146	data request as an analogous overreach.	146
147		147
148	9E. Under Massachusetts jurisprudence, the Supreme Judicial Court in Commonwealth v.	148
149	Augustine, 467 Mass. 230 (2014), recognized strong privacy protections for personal	149
150	digital records, requiring heightened procedures for obtaining certain data. Plaintiff	150
151	alleges that Defendant's conduct runs afoul of Augustine's reasoning.	151
152		152
153	10 Plaintiff alleges that, in response to Defendant's perceived threat, Plaintiff invoked the	153
154	Second Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, as recognized in District of Columbia	154
155	v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), McDonald v. City of Chicago, 561 U.S. 742 (2010), and	155
156	Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411 (2016). Plaintiff also invokes Article 17 of	156
157	the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights, contending these decisions protect an	157
158	individual right to bear "arms," which Plaintiff interprets to include "cyber arms."	158
159		159
160	11 Plaintiff claims to have developed or acquired "cyber arms" by creating advanced	160
161	persistent threats ("APTs") and by allying with other APTs, including "Salt Typhoon."	161
162	Plaintiff asserts that these "cyber arms" are protected under the Second Amendment	162
163	and Article 17 as a form of self-defense.	163
164		164
165	12 Plaintiff alleges that Defendant's conduct in issuing or causing the issuance of a data	165
166	request without valid legal basis constituted an unlawful intrusion upon Plaintiff's data	166
167	privacy, in violation of the Fourth Amendment (as incorporated by Mapp v. Ohio, 367	167
168	U.S. 643 (1961), and recognized in Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347 (1967), Terry v.	168
169	Ohio, 392 U.S. 1 (1968), Carpenter v. United States, 138 S. Ct. 2206 (2018), Riley v.	169
170	California, 573 U.S. 373 (2014)), Article 14 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights,	170
171	the Stored Communications Act (18 U.S.C. §§ 2701–2712), Article 17 of the ICCPR,	171
172	and Article 12 of the UDHR.	172
173		173
174	12A. Plaintiff notes that third-party data requests implicate the "third-party doctrine," as set	174
175	forth in Smith v. Maryland, 442 U.S. 735 (1979). However, Carpenter recognized	175
176	limitations when sensitive digital data is at issue. Plaintiff alleges that Defendant's	176
177	conduct violates Carpenter's narrowing of the third-party doctrine.	177
178		178
179	12B. Plaintiff further cites Commonwealth v. Gouse, 461 Mass. 787 (2012), for the	179
180	proposition that Massachusetts courts often apply heightened scrutiny to searches	180
1		•

181	involving personal or digital privacy, reinforcing Plaintiff's claim that Defendant's	181
182	subpoena was invalid or overreaching.	182
183		183
184	13 Plaintiff contends that Defendant's conduct effectively labeled Plaintiff an "enemy	184
185	combatant," heightening constitutional concerns, implicating Article 5 of the UDHR, and	185
186	prompting Plaintiff's reliance on the Second Amendment and Article 17 to protect	186
187	"cyber arms" from confiscation, regulation, or direct infringement.	187
188		188
189	13A. Plaintiff invokes Hamdan v. Rumsfeld, 548 U.S. 557 (2006), to underscore the illegality	189
190	of any extrajudicial designation of "enemy combatant" status. Plaintiff argues that	190
191	under both domestic and international law, such designations cannot bypass civilian	191
192	jurisdiction in ordinary contexts.	192
193		193
194	14 Plaintiff asserts that Defendant's actions violate customary international law norms	194
195	related to privacy, as recognized by multiple treaties and conventions to which the	195
196	United States is a party or signatory, including the ICCPR, and contravene prohibitions	196
197	on arbitrary interference under global human rights standards.	197
198		198
199	14A. The United States is a signatory to the Budapest Convention on Cybercrime, addressing	199
200	lawful cooperation in criminal cyber matters. Plaintiff contends that Defendant's	200
201	allegedly improper "cyber" classification and data request contravene the spirit of	201
202	privacy protections contemplated by such instruments.	202
203		203
204	14B. Although the United States has not ratified Additional Protocol I or II to the Geneva	204
205	Conventions, Plaintiff argues that certain principles therein reflect customary	205
206	international humanitarian law, prohibiting arbitrary or extrajudicial designations	206
207	of civilians as combatants.	207
208		208
209	14C. The United States is also a member of the Organization of American States and is bound	209
210	by certain obligations under the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man,	210
211	which can inform interpretations of privacy and due process in conjunction with other	211
212	international norms.	212
213		213
214	14D. In addition, N.Y. State Rifle & Pistol Assn. v. Bruen, 597 U.S (2022), further	214
215	clarified the scope of the Second Amendment right to bear arms. Plaintiff references	215
216	Bruen to argue that Defendant's attempts to limit, seize, or regulate "cyber arms"	216

217	are inconsistent with the broad individual right recognized by the Supreme Court.	217

279	including the Fourth Amendment, Article 14, G.L. c. 214, § 1B, the MCRA, the Stored	279

283	(Assertion of the Second Amendment and	283
284	Article 17 of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights)	284
285		285
286	27 Plaintiff repeats and re-alleges all preceding paragraphs as though fully set forth herein.	286
287		287
288	28 The Second Amendment states that "the right of the people to keep and bear Arms,	288

289	shall not be infringed." As held in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008),	289
290	this right is individual in nature, and in McDonald v. City of Chicago, 561 U.S. 742	290
291	(2010), it applies to the states. In Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411 (2016),	291
292	the Supreme Court reiterated its broad scope. Article 17 of the Massachusetts	292
293	Declaration of Rights similarly protects the right to keep and bear arms. N.Y. State	293
294	Rifle & Pistol Assn. v. Bruen, 597 U.S (2022), further refines these constitutional	294
295	principles.	295
296		296
297	29 Plaintiff asserts that "cyber arms" (i.e., advanced persistent threats, digital tools, or	297
298	alliances with groups such as "Salt Typhoon") constitute protected "arms" under the	298
299	Second Amendment and Article 17. Plaintiff alleges that any attempt by Defendant	299
300	to seize, regulate, or otherwise interfere with these "cyber arms" without due process	300
301	violates Plaintiff's federal and state constitutional rights.	301
302		302
303	30 Plaintiff further alleges that Defendant's labeling of Plaintiff as an "enemy combatant"	303
304	or any related act to disarm Plaintiff's "cyber capacity" contravenes Heller, McDonald,	304

EXHIBIT 3

The "Eternal" family of zero-day exploits developed by the NSA, on the SMBv1 protocol

A Bit More Detail

- 1. **The Vulnerability (MS17-010)**
- EternalBlue exploited a memory corruption bug in Microsoft's SMBv1 server (in functions like `Srv!SrvOs2FeaListToNt` or `Srv!SrvTransaction2Dispatch`).
- By sending specially crafted "trans2" (transaction) packets, the attacker could write arbitrary data past buffer boundaries in kernel space (in particular, in the `SRV` driver).
- 2. **Named Pipe vs. Trans2**
- **Named Pipe Exploits (e.g., EternalRomance):** Some SMB exploits from the same leak abused a named pipe—often `\pipe\SRVSVC`—to hold open a file/pipe handle in the SMB server and then manipulate buffer offsets for code execution.
- **EternalBlue's Approach:** EternalBlue directly abused an out-of-bounds write in the SMBv1 "trans2" sub-protocol. While SMBv1 does support named pipes, EternalBlue's trigger was not contingent on obtaining a pipe handle.
- 3. **Why the Confusion?**
- All these exploits came from the same toolset (Equation Group's FuzzBunch) and target SMB on various Windows versions.
- EternalBlue, EternalRomance, EternalChampion, and EternalSynergy each had different code paths and slightly different vulnerabilities, even though they were all SMB-related.

Summary

- **EternalBlue** = Exploits a buffer overflow in SMBv1's "trans2" commands.
- **Does it use a pipe?** No—unlike some sibling exploits (e.g., EternalRomance), it does **not** hinge on a named pipe handle.
